Carmelites Hug Fire Places As Storm Drenches Village

One of the severest storms Carmel has experienced in years, drenched the village during the week while residents hugged fireplaces and roofs stood up under the constant beating of rain and hail.

The storm which developed into light showers on Sunday grew to such proportions that on Tuesday, it struck with all its violence, knocking down a number of trees, upsetting garbage cans and breaking window panes in several homes.

The Carmel river flowing with torrential force ran over its banks in places along the valley. At San Clemente dam, a considerable rise in the water was reported.

On the Point, residents not only suffered from the rain, but huge waves hundreds of feet high lashed against the rocks and sent sea water into the basements of homes along the beach.

While the rain in the amount that it fell was not as great as last year, the intensity of the storm was increased by the miniature cyclone on Tuesday night. Old timers around Carmel, chuckled as they tried to keep roofs from leaking and recalled that it was "the worst storm in history."

According to Dr. Ferdinand Haasis of the Carnegie coastal laboratory, the total rainfall for Carmel from Sunday until Thursday morning was 2.63 inches.

Burned Trees Hurt Inspiration Noted Author Claims in Court

How much of a part scenic surroundings play in providing inspiration for a famous author is the question Superior Judge H. G. Jorgensen must decide shortly in handing down a decision in the $9400 damage suit filed by Harry Leon Wilson of Carmel Highlands against Meyer Rosenberg.

Wilson is seeking the damages as an aftermath to a fire in the Carmel Highlands which destroyed most of the trees on his estate, including a historic bridge leading to his home.

On the stand in the superior court at Salinas last week, Wilson asserted that the blaze was started by workers on the highway employed by Rosenberg. He charged that the blaze was caused through negligence on the part of Rosenberg employees "who did not take the necessary precautions."

Wilson testified on the stand that the tall Monterey pines, which had been so arranged to frame a picture of the Pacific ocean from his study window, were destroyed by the fire.

When the flames swept his lands, he said, the trees were reduced to blackened stumps, along with scores of other pines, two ghost cypress trees more than 100 years old and numerous shrubs that were always a "factor of beauty and grandeur."

It was in his Carmel Highlands studio where he wrote: "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Merton of the Movies," and countless other best sellers which brought him literary fame.

He has been a resident in the Highlands since 1914 when he first came to California from the east and constructed his home there.

Following the taking of testimony, Judge Jorgensen took the case under submission and is expected to give his decision in the case within the next week or so.

Entertainment Galore Planned for "Circus"

Everything was in readiness today for the Monterey polo club circus to be held tomorrow night, featuring one of the most varied programs of entertainment ever put together on the peninsula.

Not only will there be the regular dancing with Ed Fitzpatrick's orchestra furnishing the music, but there will be dozens of side shows and games of chances. There will be fortune telling and even a "muscle dancer" from Carmel who will beat anything that Barnum ever offered.

And if the weather permits it, a large tent will be put up, in which there will be prize fight and wrestling exhibitions with soldiers from the Monterey presidio participating.

Madame Mathilda Baumgartner, the fair lady from the Carmel Nudist colony, so the report has it, will be on hand to discuss the innermost secrets of "sun worship."

The best part of it is that Carmel residents can come in overalls, riding boots, tuxedos or any type of clothes they can get a hold of. Mayor Catlin and Charles Roberts Aldrich will judge the costumes.

It will be a great show and all proceeds going for the aid of the peninsula unemployed.

According to Mrs. Sydney Fish, who is having direct charge of the show, there will be a number of reserved tables which can be obtained at a nominal cost through telephoning Mr. Parker at Hotel Del Monte.

Democrats Endorse for Carmel's Postmastership

The Democratic County Committee has endorsed Mrs. Irene Cator, sister of City Attorney Argyll Campbell, for postmaster of Carmel, in place of William L. Overstreet when his term expires. Mrs. Cator was the first wife of the late Thomas Vincent Cator, musician and composer.

It is understood that Congressman-elect McGrath has agreed to recommend for appointment the endorsees of the Democratic county committee in each instance, and that all Republican post masters will be replaced by Democrats as fast as their terms expire.

Mrs. Jack Hairs was a visitor in San Francisco this week and was a guest at Hotel Canterbury.

Zoning Battle Will Be Fought Out at Next Tuesday's Hearing

Carmel's battle to keep commercialism from its front door is scheduled to come to a climax next Tuesday in Salinas when the formal zoning hearing is held by the Monterey county planning commission.

A petition bearing over one thousand names of residents in and around Carmel will be presented to the commission requesting immediate action to adopt a zoning plan that will prevent the establishment of a commercialized area at the entrance of the city.

Over three hundred residents in this section, including Mayor John Catlin and members of the city council, will be present at the hearing and will verbally request the zoning to protect the "future scenic beauty of territory surrounding Carmel."

Protests against the zoning of the territory in question have already been filed with the planning commission by Paul Flanders of the Carmel Land company and Willis J. Walker, who owns property near the Mission.

Those in support of the zoning plan expect to push through their fight for protection over these two protests. They will demand that the commission recommend to the supervisors the adoption and legal enforcement of the plan.

"It is the duty of the commission when a majority of property owners ask for a zoning that their request be granted," Adolph Hanke, one of the leaders in the fight said today. "It is in the hands of the commission whether or not they will allow the entrance to Carmel and to Point Lobos to be ruined by auto camps, hot dog stands and other commercialized enterprises. The majority of property owners want to protect their land and safeguard the scenic beauty of this territory. Their request must be heeded."

The Pine Cone learned from a reliable source today that should the commission fail to make a definite recommendation at Tuesday's meeting, the board of supervisors may shortly vote to abolish the planning body.

According to the authentic information received by the Pine Cone, if it fails to make a recommendation, the commission will fail in carrying out the purpose for which it was created.

Abolishment of the commission will also mean the loss of the salaried position held by Reeve Conover, engineer for the planning group. It was Conover who originally drafted the zoning maps for the surrounding territory which allowed not only auto camps and gasoline stations at the entrance of Carmel, but also hot dog stands and restaurants.

Sign Fails to Return to Papa As Court Dismisses Complaint

The Blue Bird chirped happily in Carmel again . . .

It can now fly freely over the streets of the village without interference on the part of any bad policemen.

Police Judge George L. Wood Tuesday morning dismissed the now famous sign case which had resulted in the arrest of Elizabeth (Sammy) Sampson on a complaint sworn out by Hugh Comstock, local contractor.

Dismissal of the case was made on the motion of Argyll Campbell, deputy district attorney, who told the court that it was clearly a civil case and not one for criminal prosecution.

The difficulties began sometime ago when Sammy who ran the Blue Bird Tea Garden on Dolores street persuaded Comstock to make her a wrought iron sign. Sammy bought the sign on installments and when she moved to her mother's place, The Blue Bird Tea Room, took it along.

Overtures were made to her, but the sign failed to come back to Comstock. Finally, a complaint charging Sammy with petit theft was signed by Comstock and last Tuesday morning was set for the date of the trial.

Half of Carmel was up in the courtroom to see if the Blue Bird's wings were to be clipped. Finally the Blue Bird chirped, Campbell argued and Judge Wood dismissed the case.

Sammy still has the sign!

Mr. Maverick Terril, author and producer from Hollywood is in town for a rest as the guest of Lewis Mason on 8th and Seaside street.

Merchants Prepared to Support Circulation of Stamp Scrip

One thousand dollars in stamp scrip which will take the place of money in employing crews of unemployed men in Carmel is scheduled to be placed in circulation here within the next few weeks.

This was the decision of over 80 merchants, civic leaders and city officials who Wednesday night attended at Pine Inn a special meeting of the Carmel Business association, which is sponsoring the movement.

As in the past, Carmel will act alone and will not take part in a similar movement which is under way in Monterey—at least not at the beginning. Only two of those present at the meeting were against localizing the circulation of the scrip.

The meeting opened with Eugene Watson, newly elected president of the association, giving an explanation of how the circulation of the stamp scrip will not only aid the unemployed, but will also stimulate local business.

According to Watson, as many men who are out of work as possible would be hired on city projects and they in turn would be paid in whole or in part by stamp scrip. The worker with each stamp scrip will purchase one dollar's worth of products and will affix on the back a three cent stamp. The merchant receiving the scrip will place a three cent stamp on it when he passes it on in trade to another merchant or to an employee.

Each time the scrip goes into different hands, a three-cent stamp is placed on it. When it has circulated 36 times, it will contain $1.08 in stamps which will be redeemed by either the association, the city or a group of merchants. It has not yet been decided who will have charge of redeeming the scrip into actual cash.

At Wednesday night's meeting, the entire group were enthusiastic over the plan and appointed Howell Byrnes as chairman of the committee to handle the details of the plan. On the committee are Louis Levinson, Willard Whitney, E. H. Ewig, W. L. Overstreet, Miss Mary Burt Messer and James L. Cockburn.

Electors Who Failed To Vote Are Disqualified

A large number of Carmel residents received notices this week from the county clerk's office at Salinas advising them that their registrations as electors had been cancelled.

The cancellation is in accordance with the provisions of the new permanent registration law, which disqualifies any voter who failed to cast a ballot at either the last August primary or the November general elections.

Electors whose registrations have been so cancelled must re-register before they will again be entitled to vote in any election in Monterey county. It will also be necessary for persons who have moved into another voting precinct since registering last year and women whose names have been changed by marriage must also re-register.

With the coming school election in April, Carmel residents, including those in the Sunset school district, are being urged to register at once.

Fire Losses Less In 1932 Than In 1931

The official report by Fire Chief Robert G. Leidig now on file with the city clerk shows that the losses caused by fire last year were only $1175 as compared with $6000 in 1931.

The number of fire alarms dropped from 29 in 1931 to 23 in 1932 and only one false alarm was turned in. Six rescue calls were answered by the department in addition to the fire alarms.

According to Leidig, causes of the fires in Carmel were varied. The majority of the fires, however, were caused by soot in burning chimneys and defective flue construction.

Violation of fire safety rules caused the arrest of two Carmel residents, one for turning in a false fire alarm and the other for leaving a bonfire unguarded.

Prowler Found in Home Escorted Out of Town

J. Castinita, 39, formerly employed by the city as a laborer, was found this week by police in the embarrassing position of being in someone else's home.

Castinita, took possession of an unrented cottage on Lincoln street and lived there for several days before the owner learned of his residence. Police were called and Castinita was given a six months suspended jail sentence on the assurance he would not remain in Carmel.

Ten-Mile Link on Coast Highway Open to Traffic

A ten-mile paved link in the Carmel-San Simeon highway was thrown open to traffic recently when the state highway commission accepted the new concrete boulevard from Cambria to San Simeon.

This project, costing $175,000 was completed in record time. Except for two of four bridges included in the entire improvement, the highway is ready for travel. By-passes skirting the edges of Big Sur and Little Pico creek permit traffic to pass over the entire length of the route.

Applause Brings Down Cobwebs As 'Spider' Triumphant Scores

By Herbert Cerwin

Out of the cobwebbed beams of the Community Playhouse, The Spider spun his web adroitly last week-end, smiled blandly from its silken network, and gave to enthusiastic audiences an example of the polished technique necessary for a successful theatrical production.

As skillfully as a spider spins his ancestral home, the cast dexterously worked to give a noteworthy performance. Mystery melodramas are put out under no false colors: their only objective is to thrill, entertain and amuse. No one that left the Community Playhouse during the four day run of "The Spider" (including the brazen spinster that almost fainted) can truthfully admit that they were disappointed.

From the opening curtain, the production moved so swiftly and so realistically that it immediately captured the attention of the audiences and left them glued to their seats; even the social duty of taking a cigarette puff during the intermissions was neglected. The audience squirmed in their seats between acts, not from boredom, but from impatience. They wanted the rest of the play in a hurry.

As Chatrand, the magician, Peter Burk did a clean cut piece of work. He went through his sleight-of-hand antics to his spiritual sense with the suave technique of not only a skillful magician but a fine actor. He fitted the part as if it had been especially written for him.

The members of the cast responded splendidly to Burk's acting, making possible the co-ordination of players that is so essential in a mystery thriller. Sharing honors with Burk in the field of acting was the work of Jack Gribner as the inspector of police who sets out to solve the crime that has been committed in the audience. But of course, Gribner can always be expected to do his part well.

John Stanley, after playing a small part in "Streets of New York," took a few of the honors as Alexander whose "mind reading mutterings" helped to lay the sinister foundation for the play.

Something happened to Peggy Converse—at least on Saturday night. After such outstanding work in "The Doll's House" and "The Beggar on Horseback" she failed to fit into the role of "the girl." To us in the audience it looked like a case of being miscast. She lacked the energy, the personality and the sympathetic qualities demanded by the role. Her acting was forced and trite. Yet the part was small and did not detract from the show.

Dick Masten, Bob Parrott, Eddie Caponi, Dorothy Ledyard, James Darling, W. B. Williams, Hildreth Masten, Heinie Leppert, J. E. McDermed, Alfred Flude and all the rest of the cast went through their lines with merit.

Likewise, deserving of praise were the vaudeville acts preceding the play. Hy Anderson showed he could juggle chairs and balance billiard sticks as well as he can handle razors at his tonsorial parlors. Wilna Hervey and Nan Mason assisted in singing and Ruth Austin, Patty Johnson and Ruth Pinkham did their balancing on their toes.

The production of "The Spider" showed promise that the Carmel Community Players may yet rehabilitate themselves in public esteem. A few more well rehearsed, ably directed and splendidly acted plays may permit the rejuvenation of the drama in Carmel which has been suffering from neuritis and arthritis.

ing a hose through a hallway that didn't even smell of smoke. "Yes," said Jack, "and it seems to me that one of the guests was sitting at the window reading a book."

Another polite pastime at fires in the summer used to be to make public announcements, usually from the steps of the fire engine. Such as, "Ladies and gents, let us remind you of the next play at the Forest Theater. I see before me my leading actors in the production. Yes, and there is the director in person. Right over there—that gentleman trying to hide back of the tree. As he won't step forward to tell about the play, I'll say what he would have said."

And then go into an impassioned speech of his high character and noble purpose in directing the summer show. It always helped, and some accused us of starting fires just to advertise the show.

One comedian realtor-insurer would rush to fires, enter the house at great personal risk and bring out a rocking chair. Then, at a vantage spot before the house, he would sit and rock and demand to know of those about him if their houses were insured, and ask them to step up and receive an engraved card with his compliments.

Or the time at the bakery fire—the very week we got the first big chemical wagon—when water wouldn't break through the upstairs windows from the back yard, one of the bakers ran out with a couple cases of empty beer bottles and ordered us to throw them through the windows.

Us—baseball-bottle throwers. The air clogged with bottles and crashes. Not a window left. A head pops out and cries "Water up here!"

And got the full force of the fire hose right then and there. Later it was found that the room was not harmed in the least by the fire, but the re-glazing bill was considerable.

Which reminds us of the Dr. Peake fire. Not only was it a noon time sociable, but the entire dinner table was brought right out the French doors into the yard and everybody had a snack while the laddies swarmed over the roof shoveling off shingles.

"Stop!" cried Peake, when he thought they'd ripped off enough acreage of shingles. "Stop!" And then some carpenter reminded him that they'd all have to come off anyhow, so why not have it done free. But the boys had quit and decided the fire was out anyhow, and no cajoling would get them to go at it again. Hence, never stop a fireman.

IS THAT SO?

By Winsor Josselyn

The other morning when the thermometer was polar, a taxpayer in front of the post office remarked that he hadn't seen Marshal Englund for two whole hours.

"That," replied a know-all, "is not strange. He's up home painting signs for the river. They say, 'Dangerous Ice—No Skating Today'."

Be loyal to Sunny California! Don't wear an overcoat!

As a native in this Golden State, we can say this without being rocked on the public street.

There's a way to survive these arctic winters (and the Coast Guard reports icebergs offshore) without shamefully surrendering to the effeminate eastern custom of climbing into a warm, wooly overcoat.

Know your hot spots. That's the secret. The town is full of hot spots. For instance, going from the Eighty Acres down to the post office there are definite stopping places where the hands and feet can be re-connected with the human body.

Don Staniford's has a gas furnace, tended by the P. G. & E., and within arm's reach is a rack of slick-paper magazines. Then, when a tingling in the extremities shows returning to life, you scurry out, and four doors farther on is Whitney's. From there to the post office the danger of freezing is replaced by danger-de-mort from rocketing delivery trucks and low-vision old ladies in shiny coupes.

The post office is a warm cavern with many natural marvels to inspect. Leaving by the traffic-jammed vestibule, a dash down toward Ocean will carry you as far as Kingman's and its electric furnaces, and where, too, Virginia Rockwell will turn on some hot phonograph if you're an initiate.

From here to the depths of Delos Curtis' Studio is but child's risk, and there, beside the hugest logs in town, you can sink to safety on the upholstered chalk rock hearth and praise the sun-god who created warmth.

The Japanese army is putting its soldiers on skates. Some half-wit brightly said, "Aha—that makes 'em cavalry!"

It is not true that bad liquor dissolves the filling out of your teeth. It dissolves the teeth.

Fire Yarns

True Carmelites know how to enjoy their fires. They go in the spirit of helpfulness, then, noticing the laddies doing all that can be done, they circulate in the crowd finding friends and passing the time of day. Always other fires are recalled.

"Jack," said Winsor Josselyn to Jack Jordan at a recent blaze, "remember the time we tried to help at the hotel fire?"

"You should tell me," said Jack. It seems that Jack and Winsor made a long end run down a hallway to try and batter into upstairs rooms with fire extinguishers while the firemen hosed down other flames. "Through that door!" cried Jack, pointing ahead. "Hallway must be full of fire beyond it. Come on—help me bust the door."

Two lunges at the door. The third and down went the door with Jack upon it like a child on a sled. Down to land at the feet of six round-eyed firemen carry-

The Spider Good Fun and Pleases Large Audiences

By Hal Garrott

The Spider is a mystery-murder melodrama designed to amuse T B Ms in the days when there was enough business to cause them fatigue. It is the type of play to enjoy a long run in New York and to be acceptable in Carmel about once in a season. Undoubtedly the Carmel Community Players will follow it with something closer to the traditions of the village in the way of dramatic art. The success of the present theatrical season is largely due to the selection of plays with sufficient variety to appeal to all tastes. Certainly The Spider was good entertainment. The audience applauded frequently, laughed, shuddered, and returned to their homes in rollicking mood. Chief honors belong to the director, Galt Bell, who had a large cast scattered all over the place to keep track of. As usual in Carmel the settings were excellent and the lighting effective.

Peter Burk in a long heavy lead warmed to his part as the action progressed, cloaking himself with the atmosphere of mystery peculiar to stage magicians. Jack Gribner, thank heaven, avoided the conventional interpretation of a police commissioner, and gave us a human being. Peggy Converse as feminine lead was responsible for a convincing portrayal well sustained. John Stanley as hypnotic subject might have been taking part in an actual mind-reading demonstration. Hildreth Masten as Estelle, with her broken English and Frenchy ways, provided a piquant touch.

Dorothy Ledyard as Mrs. Wimpleton convulsed the audience with her anxiety to relieve her husband at the cradle or go to the women's dressing room, or do anything so long as she escaped from the omnipresent police. Heinie Leppert as Sergeant registered effectively. Bill and his echo Dick, played respectively by Dick Masten and the delightful Eddie Caponi, drew some hearty guffaws in minor roles.

J. E. McDermed seemed sufficiently professional as the Doctor. Bob Parrott as the Manager was his own breezy, genial self. W. B. Williams well made up, behaved with that hard boiled mien common to stage hands. Alfred L. Flude stepped out of the audience protesting realistically until the villain shot him. There was a reporter, James Darling, nose enough to get news even for the Pine Cone. Tony, played by Paul Fligel, drew a laugh with his "no speak English."

The vaudeville relief proved popular. Hy Anderson did a skillful balancing act. Wilna Hervey, once famous in the movies as the Powerful Katrinka in the Toonerville Trolley series, and Nan Mason, daughter of the original Toonerville Skipper, and an actress in her own right, staged a black face song act that received considerable applause. Ruth Austin & Company with Patty Johnston and Ruth Pinkham staged a brief dance. Frank Schultzburg's Orchestra provided "musical strains."

impressions we remember best were the range and ease of that baritone voice. Any singer can shatter windows, but it takes training to sing in a home—with people who know you within touching distance—and modulate your voice so that it delights and charms your listeners.

And don't tell me that an Art Program doesn't have to be built with much architecture as a building. It wasn't accidental that the fourteen songs, and two encores, were so comfortable to hear. That off-stage preparation far in advance of the actual presentation. Work—careful, intelligent work.

As to the pieces sung, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ethel Young, musicians among us remarked on: "Morgen Hymn"—Henschel, Op. 46, No. 4; "Tell Me Why,"—Tschaiakowsky; "To The Evening Star," (Tannhauser); "Encore Song of the Flea," from Goethe's Faust; "In The Pool of Quietness,"—Cator-Wallace (both of Carmel); "The Pipes of Gordon's Men,"—Hammond; and finally that rollicking "Shortnin' Bread," by Jaques Wolf.

Present among the guests were (errors and omissions excepted): The Adolph Hankes, Mrs. and Miss Burritt, Mrs. and Miss Moll, F. E. Calkins, The Robert Welles Ritchies, the Bachelders (Sr. and Jr.), Major and Mrs. Chester Shephard, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Dormody, the W. Snooks, the C. Frosts, the J. Hagemeyers, the Richard Waldo Johnsons, the Richard Leroy Mastens, Mrs. Muriel Marsh, Mr. W. E. Chamberlain, Kit Cooke, Mr. Leon Wilson—AND Mrs. Robert Stanton, charming in black and rose.

Mrs. Helen Wilson and her son Leon spent a few days in San Francisco attending a number of new plays and concerts.

New Paintings By Ritschel On Exhibit at Del Monte

By Josephine Mildred Blanche

A group of paintings by William Ritschel, nationally known painter of marine subjects, have been recently added to the very interesting "Exhibit of Smaller Paintings" now in progress at Del Monte Art Gallery and which will be continued through January.

Two little masterpieces by this famous artist, although small in size, are extremely "big" in artistic conception and rendering, expressing as they do the vastness of ocean—its width and depth—and in one, the intricate pattern of mysterious cypresses fringing the jagged coastline, all seem under the spell of moonlight. A third painting called "The Kelp Gatherers" is no less characteristic of this artist. It depicts a gray, bleak day on the coast of Maine. A wild white sea washes a stretch of beach upon which has been thrown great piles of red-brown kelp. Groups of sturdy men are busy piling this into their carts as it comes dripping from the sea. Patient draft horses hitched to the carts stand awaiting their loads. It is a picture full of the reality and beauty of nature and of life.

Some of Ritschel's finest pictures have been of subjects of this character and a number of these are now in possession of national museums in America and Europe.

His paintings of kelp gatherers and also those of clam diggers as they hunt for clams among the sands and rocks were sketched mostly on the Maine coast. While these smaller pictures by Ritschel hold one's attention in the collection at Del Monte, there hangs on the end wall of the Gallery a very large painting recently finished and placed there by the artist—one of the most successful achievements of his brush during recent years. It is called "The Flying Dutchman." Although the legend of the phantom ship has been the inspiration of artists for generations, each interpreter gives his own characteristic charm to the interesting story.

Ritschel, in his splendid interpretation of the theme, has drawn a dramatic contrast between Illusion and Realism. He has handled this very difficult problem so cleverly that he has maintained a perfect balance of artistic values throughout. Around the apparition of a phantom ship in mid-sky he has woven most harmoniously a natural moving sky of clouds and moonlight over-arching a sea dark and terrible. Upon this a ship in distress rocks and tosses in the cradle of angry waves. Over the far distant waters a strange diffused radiance from the apparition above is seen.

Only an advanced painter with great knowledge and imagination could accomplish what Ritschel has in this his latest work.

Robert Stanton, Baritone, Sings for Pleased Friends

By Winsor Josselyn

Never let Carmel surprise you, whether it be that Robert Stanton, whom we knew here a few years ago as Bob, the Builder, is headed for vocal heights, or that the present writer, who is sometimes accused of pulling gags, has turned musical reviewer.

Either one may be perfectly true, and by a veteran Carmelean is taken as much for granted as the pine trees.

Bob Stanton is building a voice. From the age of seven he has been building toward it, only he didn't know it, and just in the past two years, under singing-master William Edwin Chamberlain, of Berkeley, has he definitely applied himself to it. Bob's mother was a prima donna. Bob was purposely veered away from the stage and put to architecture and engineering (and did himself proud at them) but always the stage kept tugging. Remember, for instance, the way he did parts, bucked scenery and helped with set designing hereabouts?

Now Bob, slimmer and younger, is singing. Going at it like a combined Rhodes Scholar and Olympic athlete. Foreign languages, physical training, music. And voice. He's got the physical equipment. He knows that he's got a lot of hard work ahead and isn't afraid of it. Beyond all—he's got a love of singing, and he's got enthusiasm. Bob is on his way up, and on the way is taking concert, radio and benefit work in stride.

An easy singer. Last Saturday evening, at Mrs. Ethel Young's home in Pebble Beach, Bob sang for a number of friends, and the

THAT CARMEL "TRADITION"

An amusing journalistic feat has been the revivifying of the corpse of the Carmelite, and its incorporation in the columns of the Monterey Peninsula Herald as an orphan department, feared but favored. Gingerly lifted with tongs, brushed timidly with a duster as the editorial face was turned aside and the editorial nose was held tightly, the defunct "Tradition" of Carmel was cleansed a bit, was editorially disowned, was apologized for abjectly, then given three-column space in that paper.

Charles Roberts Aldrich is named as editor of the reincarnation. "Not appointed by us," says the Herald, "nor by any one else we know, nor self appointed—somehow he seems to have happened." Not a part of the "tradition," only a happenchance. The revived Carmelite begins its new career "for better or worse," as the Herald puts it, under a new editor and in a new guise.

Why the doubt and mistrust? Why the explanations and apologies? Why the carefully framed advance notices denying responsibility for the new department? Can not the "tradition" of Carmel be carried on in a responsible newspaper without panic? Was the Carmelite wrapped in dynamite, or had it the plague that it must be disinfected or dumped in the bath before being introduced to the homes served by a family newspaper? Or is the Herald afraid that one of its pages will go red?

Advertisers must be given some consideration by a newspaper. Advertisers are very apt to shy away from radical tendencies in the journals they patronize. Communistic and Bolshevik ideas are not pleasant reading for the individualistic minded merchant, whose business is dependent on the continuation of the present system of government. A red page—even a pink page—in the newspaper which his advertising helps support is abhorrent to him.

Which explains why the Peninsula Herald lifted the Carmelite so gingerly; why the editor of the Herald placed the blame upon Carmel, by calling the Carmelite a Carmel "tradition"; why responsibility was avoided by editorial apologies; and also, in-

BANDOLERO . . . DON JOSE

Scarlet waisted,
Lithe and gay
The Bandolero
Don Jose!

A shattered silence,
A thread of light,
With love as spur
He rides the night.

"Coral lips
And mine alone
Tonight I claim them
For my own . . ."

O love is fleeting,
Love measures by
The nearest arm,
The frailest sigh.

For through the wide
And willing door
Before Jose
Went one before . . .

Eyes of fire
Piercing through
Before his silver blade
He drew.

A silken swish,
A cry of pain,
A serpent is uncoiled
Again.

Never a look
Or a backward glance
But at his side
The unsheathed lance!

"Coral lips
And like the leaf
Their fragrant petals
All too brief . . ."

cidentally, why Lincoln Steffens is not editor of the Carmelite department of the Herald.

We would be the first to admire and applaud the courage of the Herald if it had chanced disapproval of its advertisers and put out a department of radical tendencies under its own endorsement. But there has been too much effort to dodge responsibility for any cheers for bravery. The whole move looks like an effort to pick up subscribers among the "pinks" of Carmel, at the same time avoiding friction with the patriotic Americans. A newspaper with the stars and stripes on its front page and the red flag on page five, with an editor for each section, is not going far without limping. Especially when the page-one editor has to keep apologizing for what the page-five editor prints.

And Carmel, with twenty-odd years of "tradition" of clean Americanism will not accept the blame that the Herald rejects. The Carmelite as it is now, or as it was in the past, has never been representative of the "tradition" of Carmel. We deny that emphatically.

LEST WE FORGET

On Tuesday afternoon next, at two o'clock, at the County Courthouse in Salinas, the County Planning Commission will take final action in the matter of zoning the Carmel-San Simeon Highway from the toll-gate to the river bridge.

This is Carmel's bravest fight for the retention of the scenic beauty of its immediate surroundings, the freedom of the highway from obnoxious signboards, shacks, autocamps, filling stations, camp-grounds, lunch, hot-dog and fruit stands, and for prevention of a shopping center on the state highway at Carmel's very gates. Every resident and business man of Carmel is directly affected, and should be present at this meeting to help secure a protective ordinance.

Turn out in force, and prove that Carmel stands solidly for its ideals and its homes.

People Talked About

Pedro J. Lemos, Palo Alto and Carmel artist, having completed his agreed period of connection with the Allied Arts Guild in Menlo Park, has resigned as executive officer from the directory of the Guild. Mr. Lemos, as co-founder and President of the Allied Arts Guild has been identified with the organization since its beginning. He has been director of the Stanford Museum of Fine Arts and the Stanford Art Gallery since 1917 and is also Editor-in-Chief of the School Arts Magazine published in the east.

Because of his successful plans for the Allied Arts Guild, Lemos has been offered and has accepted a commission for supplying complete plans for a group of sales studios and summer school center to be located near one of the Great Lake Highways in the East.

International publicity was again given Robinson Jeffers, when an interview illustrated with photographs was carried this week by the United Press associations.

The interview tells of Jeffers' early career and how he came to settle in Carmel and finally constructed his now famous stone tower. One of the humorous incidents that occurred to Jeffers in connection with the erection of the tower is told in the United Press story and follows:

"When Jeffers had finished building his tower, he went up one night, intending to remove some mortar from the oriole. Jeffers fixed a rope and lowered it on the oriole and started lowering himself. Some workmen who had been building on a nearby convent and who had watched this literary figure, now looked up in horror and then came running.

The solution of the hermit's madness had been found. He was going to hang himself! That's why he had built the tower. They looked up trembling and saw him carefully scratching mortar off the little oriole."

The Rev. F. W. Sheldon, formerly minister at the Community Church here, sends us word of the death of Clinton Scollard, the poet, which took place at Winter Park, Florida, last fall, and recalls to our mind that Scollard and Miss Jessie Rittenhouse were married by him here several years ago.

Clinton Scollard's collected poems will be published by MacMillan this fall, arranged and edited by Mrs. Scollard, herself a well known poet.

The Chronicle reviews "Thyrus and Other Poems," by Louisa Carroll Thomas on Sunday's book page, in the following paragraphs, signed by W. A. Brower, Jr.:

"Many things besides arguments over colored sidewalks come from Carmel, and one of the most pleasant of Carmel's gifts to the world is an occasional piece of unusually good bookmaking from the Press in the Forest. "Thyrus," by Louisa Carroll Thomas (a descendant of the Carrolls of Carrollton, it is said) is such a book. Its bid for attention from connoisseurs of good typography deserves to be heard.

Somehow there is a fitness in the use of handset type for printing poetry, perhaps even more than for other literary forms. After all, proper poems are not "dashed off" or reeled out by the yard, and their investiture in type should be equally craftsmanlike and unhurried. And that is the case with these verses; their black-and-white—or, rather, sepia-and-buff—dress has been skillfully and tastefully tailored to them. The master of the Press in the Forest has wisely avoided temptations to be "arty" and so has produced a book which many will wish to own.

The poems, which are about twenty in number, include some delicate lines and a general directness of expression which is refreshing. This is their second publication. Mrs. Thomas should continue on the poetic way, and it is to be hoped that her next book will come equally charmingly arrayed from the standpoint of type.

A thyrus, by the way, is the symbolic vine-wreathed wand borne in the Bacchic mysteries. Your reviewer looked it up.

Miss Peggy Mathiot, who lives up the Carmel Valley on the Rancho Carmelo, is an expert rifleman, the second highest class at Del Monte next May.

in the National Rifle Association, whose headquarters are in Washington, D.C. In a competition that embraced the entire country, she won distinction and high honors, being one of twenty-two Californians to qualify.

The highest class in the association is that of "distinguished rifleman," with "expert rifleman" second, running down to the lowest grade of "pro-marksman." In all the grades, throughout the United States, 38,750 junior shooters qualified, of whom 59 succeeded in winning distinguished decoration, and 377 attained the expert rating.

Mrs. Clara L. Beller was the principal speaker on Wednesday at a meeting of the current events section of the Woman's club held at the Girl Scout House. Mrs. Willis White spoke on conditions in the far east.

Mrs. E. G. Pinkham, Miss Betty Pinkham and Mrs. Jack Todd of Carmel were the guests of the Monterey peninsula garden club at a meeting held early this week. The club has definitely decided to hold a peninsula-wide flower show at Del Monte next May.

So I went farther downtown, to Market street, hunting a grade floor that was empty of tenants for the moment. Finding a vacant store just above Third street, in the very heart of business now, I rented it for the term until the fall election, got out a big banner, "City Headquarters, Regular Republican League," hired a few desks and a half hundred chairs, and moved in. As between the sixteenth floor of the Mills building and a walk-in on Market street, the answer wasn't difficult, and shortly my headquarters was going the business of the city campaign, while MacMurray waited, almost alone, in his suite in the air. I had stolen control from him.

Hiram Johnson made a brave but hopeless fight against our coalition in the 45th district. Chester H. Rowell came from Fresno to make a speech for his friend, but Rowell didn't fit so well with a Telegraph Hill audience, most of whom didn't know the meaning of the words he used. The day after we defeated Johnson at the polls, I went to him at his office, and said,

"Mr. Johnson, I am a delegate to the city convention from your district. We of the 45th would feel very proud to have you in that convention, representing us. Will you accept my place upon that delegation?"

"I don't understand. I fought you; you won. Now you are offering me your place?"

"I'm offering you the entire delegation. They are pledged to take my program at the convention. If you will accept my place, you can dictate the actions of the delegation."

Hiram Johnson lit his pipe, and looked at me through the blue smoke. He said, "This is the most unusual proposition I ever had made to me, Newberry. I have been told that you were a very practical politician, and to put it plainly, not too scrupulous. Have I been misinformed?"

"You have heard but one side of it," I grinned. "If you listen in at the Mills building, I'm rotten; but on Market street, just above Third, I'm quite a decent chap. Anyhow, my offer to you hasn't any strings to it. You can take the 45th delegation into the convention, and do what you please with it."

"But what do you get out of it?" He was still suspicious.

"Say that I think some day you're going far in politics, and I want your friendship then. Say that I believe you can do better for my following in the district than I could, myself. Those are reasons that are perfectly understandable, and are not at all the real ones."

"Give me the real reasons."

"No. You wouldn't believe them. But I will ask you to get another slant on my character from people we both know, in whom you have confidence." I gave him the names of half a dozen men whom I had worked with, and he noted them on his pad, but there was no hesitation now. He said,

"I think your offer is sporting, and I'll take it up. How do we make the change?"

"The delegation meets tomorrow night at my house to organize. You'll be there, please. I'll resign, you'll be named and elected chairman, and the delegation will then vote unit-rule, and put itself entirely in your hands. After which we'll smoke a bit, drink a gallon or two of red wine, and go home."

"I'll be there with my pipe," said Hiram Johnson, and so started his political career. Also there started a friendship between us that has lasted through the years. A little more than a year later, in November 1910, I went to his office to congratulate him when the returns showed that he had been elected governor of the state of California.

It was our first substantial victory since I had been interested in California politics. My bunch of short-hairs, hungry for jobs, was hilarious over the chance to get their hoofs in the trough, and eat at the public expense. Hiram Johnson, after thanking me for the help I had given his campaign, intimated that he would not forget my services when it came to patronage.

"I'm through with politics," I told him. "Hereafter I'm a writer, maybe, or an advertising man, but never a politician again. You'll get no advice from me on conducting the office of governor, nor will I be asking jobs for myself or my friends."

"But—Perry—"

"I know what you'd say, Hiram, and I appreciate your thoughtfulness, but I'm dodging it. I can stand defeat all right, but not a victory. I'll never ask you any political favors." And in the twenty-odd years of Hiram Johnson's public service in high office, I have lived up to that promise.

In the spring of that year—1910—I found that my stories were bringing in enough cash returns to assure me a living independent of Carnation Mush and its advertising, and Bertha and I decided that we would find a pleasant place to live, where economies could be practiced without damage to pride, and give all my time to writing fiction. We had a few hundred dollars saved up, our debts were paid, and the spring-fret was in our blood. Tahiti and the South Seas being out of the question, we started to find the ideal spot in California for our future home.

I went first to Santa Barbara on an over-Sunday trip, was caught in a storm that washed out the railroad tracks and left me, for two weeks, flood-bound in that city. Rob Wagner, artist and writer, whom I had known back in Michigan, took me into his home, where I met Edward Stewart White, John M. Gamble, the painter, and other writers and artists. Altogether I had a wonderful visit, but did not like the city as a place to live.

The next town looked over was Monterey. Bertha and I came and spent the night in the old Pacific Ocean hotel, down by the Custom House. After breakfast next morning, we were waiting for a car to take us to Pacific Grove, when Harry Lafler bumped into us. He had homesteaded a quarter-section down below the Big Sur, where he now lived most of the year, proving up, and was in town for supplies.

When we told him our mission, he knew the answer exactly. Carmel, he said, was the ideal spot for our home. That we had not considered Carmel before, although George Sterling was living there, was due to the fact that Frank Powers, one of its owners and also friend—or acquaintance rather—of ours, had boosted it too strongly. His encomiums of the village had soured it for us.

It had begun in the old days, before the earthquake, at the center table of Coppa's. Frank Powers, big and noisy, would bring his chair to our table, crowd in among us, and boom his great voice in praise of his subdivision by the sea. He wanted us to make it headquarters for our week-end excursions, then taken to Tomoloma, Martinez, Porter Garnett, Gellett Burgess, Jack London, and the other habitués of Coppa's deplored the persistence and noise of this boasting, and we all kept away from Carmel. That early disgust taught me my lesson of how not to advertise Carmel, and I have always since been an advocate of soft-pedaling the merits of the place.

But Harry Lafler on that spring morning insisted that before we looked anywhere else for a home, we should visit Carmel. It was Sunday, and no stage ran over the hill, but it was only a short walk, he assured us, and we could take the trail through flowery meadows and delightfully shaded woods. If we bought in Carmel, as he felt sure we would as soon as we saw its beauty, he would sell us all the shakes we needed to roof and wall our house for the bare cost of hauling from his ranch.

Before he was through talking, we were on our way up the long hill, hiking through the dust. It was further than it had sounded in his telling, and the cut-off trail didn't seem to shorten it much, but we were in no hurry. At last, as we topped a hill that gave us a broad view of the bay, turquoise blue in the sun, breaking against the curve of white sands, that seemed to melt into the emerald green forests behind it, we grew as enthusiastic as our guide and stepped forth blithely to make the last, down-hill mile of our way to Carmel.

Now is your last opportunity the following petition will be presented to the Honorable Planning Commission of Monterey County on January 31st

Honorable Planning Commission of Monterey County

We, the undersigned, being property owners or residents of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea and environs, who would be vitally, directly and indirectly effected by any zoning advocated by your commission, hereby petition you to protect the present beautiful and desirable entrance to our city by recommending to the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Monterey County only such zoning as would permanently restrict a strip of land 500 feet wide on each side of the State Highway between the present approximate location of the Del Monte Properties Toll Gate, at the top of the Carmel Hill, and the point where the said State Highway now or eventually will cross the Carmel River, and recommend that the said strip of land be zoned for residential purposes only.

We not only request and petition this on our own behalf but on behalf of the entire state of California. This section is the Northern entrance to the Carmel-San Simeon Highway and the newly created Point Lobos State Park, both of which were constructed and acquired by the State of California at a cost of many millions of dollars to the citizens, chiefly and primarily for the purpose of displaying to and preserving for the citizens of our State and visitors the unparralleled and unsurpassed natural beauty of the Monterey Peninsula. We do not desire to have the purposes, for which these great expenditures have been made, deteriorated by allowing commercial enterprises to exist at the very entrance to California's most attractive and renowned section.

We respectfully submit the same herewith for your consideration:

All residents and property owners of Carmel, Hatton Fields, La Loma Terrace, Carmel Woods and environs are

Overstreet to Keep Post Here While Gibbet Awaits Others

European Kings are not the only ones who these days are trying to keep their balance as tight-rope walkers. In this country, and particularly in California, it's the Republican postmasters that are attempting to hold their equilibrium.

cratic national headquarters calls for a complete clean-up of all government jobs held by Republicans. Already in Monterey county alone, four postmasters have been prepared for the gibbet.

In Carmel, however, the situation is apparently quite different and Postmaster William Overstreet has more than an even chance of remaining in the same shoes he has occupied for the last three and a half years.

One of the reasons for his holding his own is the fact that his term does not expire for another eight months and despite the fact that he is a Republican, he has the support of some of the Monterey county democratic committee.

Since his appointment three years ago, Overstreet has served with unusual ability and has improved vastly the services of the local postoffice as compared with the past. No other postoffice of the size of Carmel has as large a number of postal boxes. Despite this fact, service at the Carmel postoffice is faster than in most other communities.

Indications as they appear now, seem to point definitely to keeping Overstreet in office for another term. In Salinas, Pacific Grove, Kings City and Castroville, the offices are all scheduled to be filled by Democratic party members. In Monterey, Postmaster Stewart has another three years before his term expires.

In the Carmel program Carol Weston and Dora Blaney, pianist, will play the sonata by Cesar Franck, a sonata by Brahms, and a sonata by Paderewski, which Carol Weston played for the great Pole himself to his great delight and commendation.

Photo Exhibit

An exhibition of the work of the nine leading California photographers is being shown this week at the Denny-Watrous gallery. The work of Edward Weston is also included.

Will Study Winds For Kite Flying Day

Serious study of meteorological conditions in Carmel is being made by an appointed group with the intention of determining exactly the prevailing winds on the 22nd day of February, 1933. The result of this forecast is anxiously awaited by hundreds of citizens of Carmel. That these citizens, and also the meteorological committee, are all boys and girls of school age does not minimize the importance of the prophecy.

For February 22 is kite-flying day in Carmel, and the direction of the wind on that occasion is of grave importance. Already kites are being built in many a family woodshed in preparation for the events, hopefully constructed for prize-winners. With scissors, paste, splints and string, boys are making ready for the big day. And the committee on winds is not going to let them down this year. Pluvius will be tamed to puff his breath in the right direction at the proper time, or the meteorological committee will know why.

Under the general direction of Rev. Willis G. White, who has promoted kite flying day for the past two years in Carmel, the varied contests and exhibitions of the air circus will be staged at the Mesa, in Hatton Fields. Commit-

Carol Weston In Recital On February Fourth

As Carol Weston's recital approaches, more and more interest is being shown in the concert appearance of this gifted, brilliant violinist in the Denny-Watrous Gallery on Saturday evening, February 4. Orchestra members, whose devotion Miss Weston has won through her tireless and dynamic direction of the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra, are on the qui vive to see the house sold out, and friends from San Francisco are talking of coming to Carmel for the event.

Carol Weston has had all her training in America. She took her first degree in music at Notre Dame in San Jose, at the age of fifteen, studied further in California and then went to New York to study with the celebrated Auer, who paid great tribute to her ability and achievement. Somewhat later she went on tour with Dora Blaney, pianist, playing concerts in England, Canada, and throughout the United States. Like Antonia Brico, Ethel Leginska and others, Carol Weston has been much interested in conducting, and has had orchestras in Hawaii, conducted the Metropolitan Theatre Symphony Orchestra for eight months, the American Theatre in Oakland.

The Devil Walks

By Herbert Cerwin

And now that our neighbor, eulogy in the Herald on the demise of Lincoln Steffens, has lost his voice of the Carmelite—he has been sent him a remnant of black wearing a scarf around his throat crepe—to be worn on his sleeve.

Which reminds us that after Charles Aldrich's splendid funeral reviews for Liberty was in a serious accident some years back. His doctors to gain their fee, built a plaster cast around his chest to keep his weary and broken bones in place.

Rob was then directing a picture, when suddenly he was seized by a terrific itch under the cast. So snug was the cast, no human hand could reach the seat of trouble. In torment, he finally called the property man into consultation.

"Sure, I'll think something up," said the property man and went into conference with himself.

Ten minutes later, he returned with a flat wire so constructed it could be slipped under the cast. Rob said he took the afternoon off and enjoyed the best scratch he ever did have!

William Lyon Phelps, who in addition to being head of the English department at Yale has made a mark in the literary world, signs his letters with the initials: T. B. I. Y. T. B.

The initials form a quotation from Browning: "The best is yet to be."

Robinson Jeffers, has another book of poetry coming out shortly under the Liveright banner.

It will bear the title: "Give Your Heart to the Hawks."

Mabel Dodge Luhan who is living on the Point has another book coming out this spring. Her first book, "Lawrence in Taos," was an outstanding literary hit last year.

Magazines work not only months but years in advance. Fred Becholdt's sea serial which started with its first installment in a current issue of Blue Book was written and sold by him two years ago.

It is to be regretted that Ernest Hemingway could not be in town to participate in the rituals for the first issue of the new Carmel weekly newspaper. Perhaps, he might send the editor an autographed copy of "The Sun Also Rises."

Mrs. Armstrong to Talk At Book Group of Club

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Armstrong will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the book section of the Carmel Woman's club to be held next Wednesday morning at the Girl Scout House. Mrs. Armstrong will review, "People of the Serpent," a book dealing with the Maya Indians.

Mrs. James Lynch, chairman of the book review section will preside during the discussion.

Local Bank President Holds Unique Position

T. A. Work is not only president of the Carmel bank, but also heads four other banks in this section.

Probably no other banker in the state holds quite the same unique position as Work, for the banks of which he is president are each financial houses, independent of each other. In addition to the Carmel bank which is managed by Charles Berkeley, Work is also president of banks in Salinas, Monterey, Pacific Grove and Hollister.

Russell Scott Resigns District Attorney Job

Russell Scott, for the last two years district attorney of Monterey county, announced his resignation from office this week.

He told members of the board of supervisors that he would like his resignation to become effective at once. According to his announcement, he is retiring from public life to enter into private practice with two other Salinas attorneys.

When his announcement became public, gossip immediately began to circulate as a possible successor. Two men, it is understood, have been the best chances of becoming Scott's successor. They are Harry Noland, who is deputy district attorney, and John Thompson, well known Monterey lawyer.

Argyll Campbell, deputy district attorney who resides in Carmel, is probably the most logical successor to Scott's post. Campbell, however, claims he would not take the job in a gold platter—for it would mean that he would have to reside in Salinas.

In past years, political groups have urged Campbell to seek the office, but each time he has declined. He definitely told the Pine Cone yesterday, he would not seek the appointment as district attorney.

Intending To Wed

An application to obtain a marriage license was sought this week in the county clerk's office by Lowell Davenport and Marjorie Gebhardt. Both said they were residents of Carmel.

Time Limit for Sewer Connections Extended

Extension of the time limit for residence sewer connections to one year is allowed under an ordinance passed by the city council at a special meeting held early this week.

Passage of the ordinance was necessary because additions to the sewage disposal plant of the Car-
